

ANNIE SLAUGHTER

PROJECT COORDINATOR, WILMOT INC.

Annie's background in environmental science and stakeholder management allows her to balance coordinating multiple projects while focusing on sustainable design and innovation.

Education

Bachelor of Science
Environmental Science:
Public Health
Loyola University Chicago

Growing up camping and canoeing around the Northwoods of Wisconsin, Annie developed an appreciation for the natural world. She was exposed to an array of agricultural knowledge at a young age, including gardening and beekeeping, which furthered her passion for conservation and the natural environment.

After graduating from Loyola University Chicago with a degree in Environmental Science, Annie combined her passions for food, ecology, and communities and started her professional career in sustainable food systems work. Through her education and professional work, she deepened her understanding of the connection between human and environmental health.

Annie joined Wilmot as a project coordinator and has been working with David Adams, Natalie Connor, Ava Hetzel, Lilly Berger, Thomas Rowland, and Leif Watkins on the East Bank Project.

Notable Projects:

The East Bank Project

Nashville, TN

Teamed to establish sustainability guidelines and implementation measures to ensure resiliency and sustainable development for the East Bank development.
